This study was aimed to investigate the effects of sulforaphane on lipopolysaccharide (LPS)-induced inflammatory responses in RAW 264.7 macrophages. The cells were pretreated with sulforaphane for 1h and then stimulated with LPS for an additional 18h. The results showed that sulforaphane potently down-regulated the expression of iNOS and COX-2 proteins, as well as the release of NO and PGE2. Moreover, sulforaphane also suppressed the release of IL-6 and IL-1 $\beta$  in LPS-activated RAW 264.7 macrophages. In addition, sulforaphane significantly reduced the activation of Akt, p38, and JNK signaling pathways in LPS-treated RAW 264.7 macrophages. Our data suggested that sulforaphane suppressed LPS-induced macrophage activation by inhibiting inflammatory responses via blocking the activation of Akt, p38, and JNK pathways. Therefore, sul
